Overview

Fostering Innovation consists of 18 lessons (3 hours, 11 minutes)

Introduction to Innovation and Creativity, Creating a Positive Environment, Encouraging Risk-Taking, Innovating as a Team, Gaining Momentum

This tutorial is designed for managers who want to learn how to foster innovation or brush up on their skills in this area.

Lessons feature these books and videos:

Description

No organization today can afford to sit still, even for a moment; to do so is to risk losing ground to competitors and leave openings for upstart challengers. To help your business stay ahead of the curve, you need to know how to foster innovation on your team. Innovation is about shaping the future—in big ways or small. It involves finding products, practices, and processes that are useful and novel, and that create value. But innovation doesn't just happen—it requires certain conditions to thrive. By understanding what supports innovation—and what stands in its way—you can ensure

Learn from Failure and Success

Introduction

Fear of repercussions for making mistakes can prevent people from trying new things. Ease your team members' concerns by setting aside time during and after a project to review what has worked and what hasn't. Although this lesson comes from the world of software engineering, it contains tips for managers from all industries.

Introduction to Retrospectives

There once were three little pigs who, after surviving numerous harrowing encounters with the Big Bad Wolf, lived happily in their sturdy brick house at the edge of the forest. Having ousted the wolf, the pigs once again felt safe in their neighborhood. One day, the pigs decided to

Aufidius 17 F1, Domitius 104 F2 OGR 18.2–4 After him [sc. Tiberius Silvius] reigned Aremulus Silvius, who is said to have been a man of such arrogance not only towards men, but also towards the gods, that he claimed that he was greater than Jupiter himself. When heaven was thundering, he ordered his soldiers to beat their shields with their weapons and kept saying that he was making the louder noise. (3) But he was afflicted by an immediate punishment, for, struck by lightning and caught up in a whirlwind, he was hurled into the Alban Lake, as is written in the fourth book of the annals <of the Pontifices> and in the second book of Piso's Epitomae. (4)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> F3 For other accounts of Aremulus (with variant versions of his name) see Livy 1.3.9; Ovid met. 14.617–18, fast. 4.50; DH 1.71.3; Euseb. chron. (Arm.) 138–9 (=Diod. 7.3.10–11); Hier. chron. 79b^d; Oros. 1.20.5; Zon. 7.1.8. The sources differ on his fate. For Livy and Ovid he was struck by lightning. Dionysius and Zonaras have him swamped by an overflow of the lake, a version close to that attributed by the OGR to Aufidius and Domitius. Both features appear in Eusebius and in the version here attributed to the 'Annals of the Pontifices' and to Piso. The Greek myth of Salmoneus provided the model for the tale of emulation of Jupiter's thunder punished by lightning, to which the local detail of the lake has been added. See K. F. Smith, AJPh 16 (1895), 203–10; Forsythe, Piso, 314–16. Forsythe very speculatively argues that the Aremulus story was invented c.130 by the compiler of the eighty-book Annales Maximi and taken over from that work by Piso, and that the invention was prompted by two recent prodigies reported by Obsequens (24, 27), namely the overflowing of the Fucine Lake in 137 and a praetor's being killed by lightning in 130 (Forsythe, Piso, 67–8, 314–19; followed

Private International Law and Public Law

Elgar Research Reviews in Law

Horatia Muir Watt

The conspicuous absence of private international law from the current global governance debate may be traced in part to its traditional 'public law taboo', fed by liberal understandings of statehood and its characteristic public/private divide, in the context of the modern schism between the public and private branches of international law. This research review discusses work that is of immediate interest to both public and private international lawyers, and more broadly to all those interested in new forms of global governance and the theory of law beyond the state.
